Resume 30

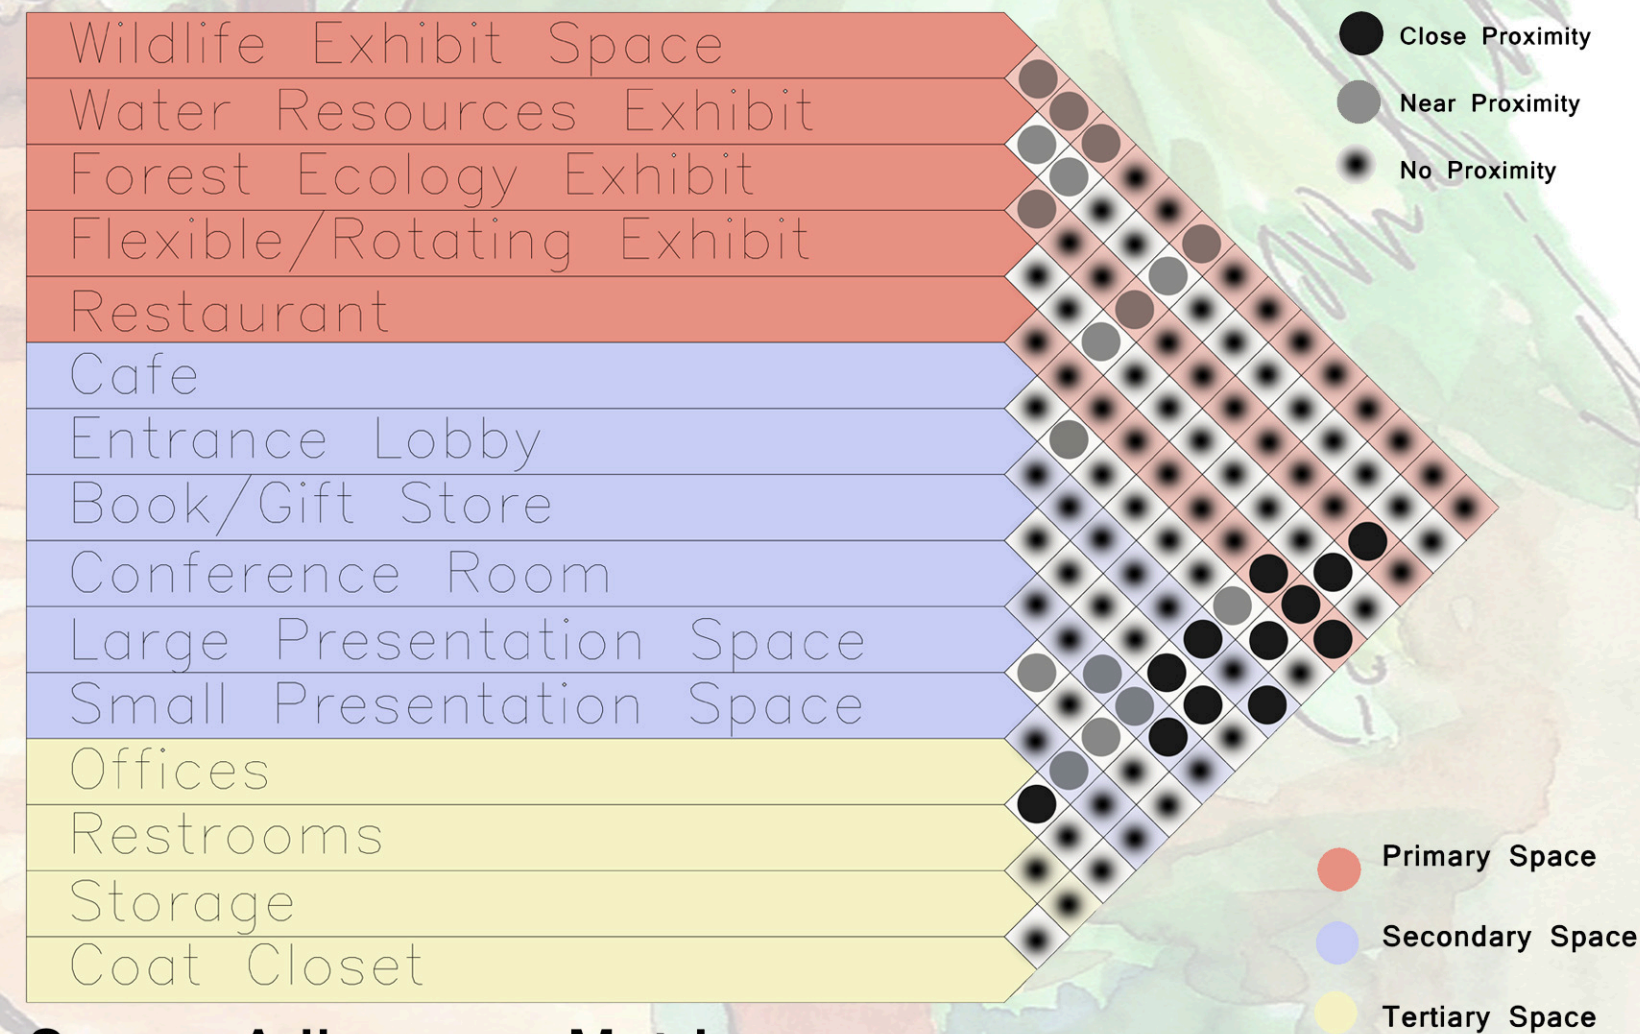

Exploring the complexities of concepts in design is a step that is the motivation that spurs my design process. Finding meaning in shapes, colors, and media they are represented in, I can bring new understandings to ideas and cultural perspectives. Happiness through design could bring about more clarity of life's purpose by taking the fear out of our complex processes. In Short, creating designs that inspire joy and that also shape understanding is my goal.

Center*

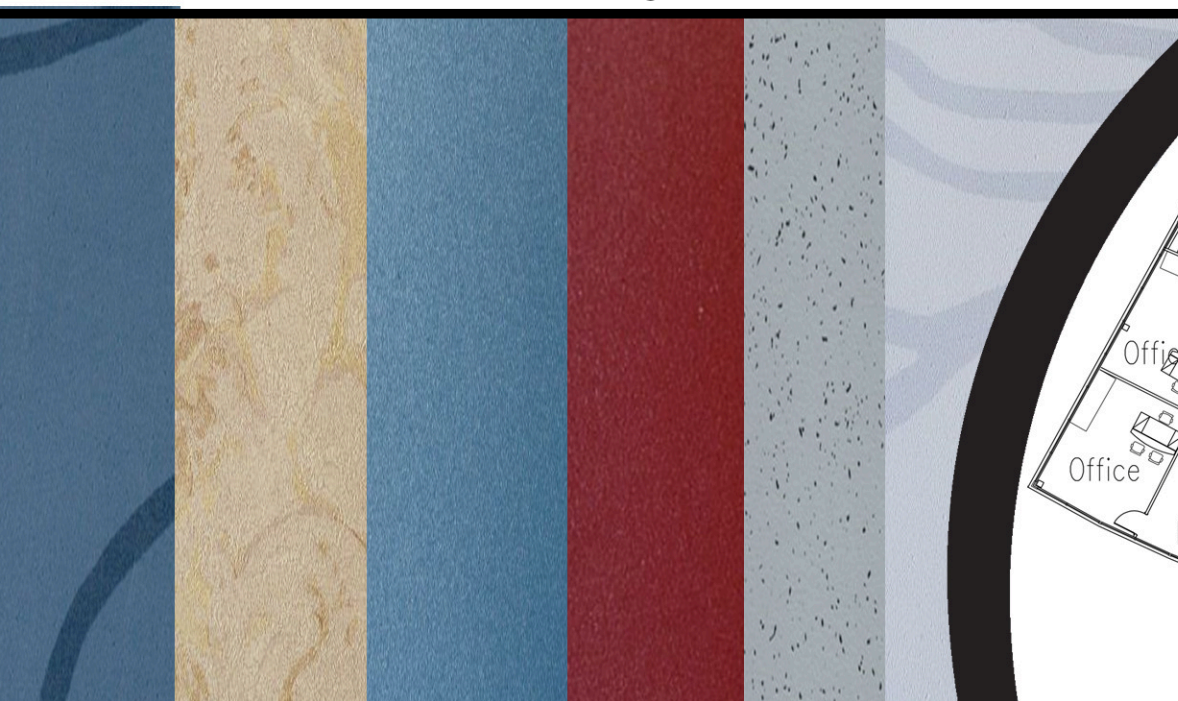

Milladore's Environmental Conservation Education Center will be a stepping stone in the spirit of exploration and learning to better appreciate the local wildlife as well as give the tools to better protect it. Creating a complex and stimulating space using hints of mystery can provide a sense of wonder that will motivate travel on nearby paths and beyond.

The background is a white canvas adorned with various watercolor elements. There are several large, overlapping circular brushstrokes in shades of purple, blue, and green. A horizontal purple brushstroke is positioned above the word 'K'. A red brushstroke is located above the letter 'i'. The entire page is scattered with small, colorful dots in purple, blue, and green, creating a whimsical, starry effect.

Kaleem Residence

Connecting with Egyptian, Middle Eastern, and Swedish Roots. I used the Nile River as inspiration as it is the heart Egypt, so I wanted it to represent the heart of the house. Privacy is extremely important in Middle Eastern culture and the Kaleem's wanted to connect with it while still having a contemporary and open concept home.

The background is a complex abstract composition. It features a mix of charcoal grey and brown tones, with some areas appearing as if they have been drawn with a pencil or charcoal. There are also soft, watercolor-like washes of color, including a light blue square and a larger red square. The overall effect is one of layered, textured art.

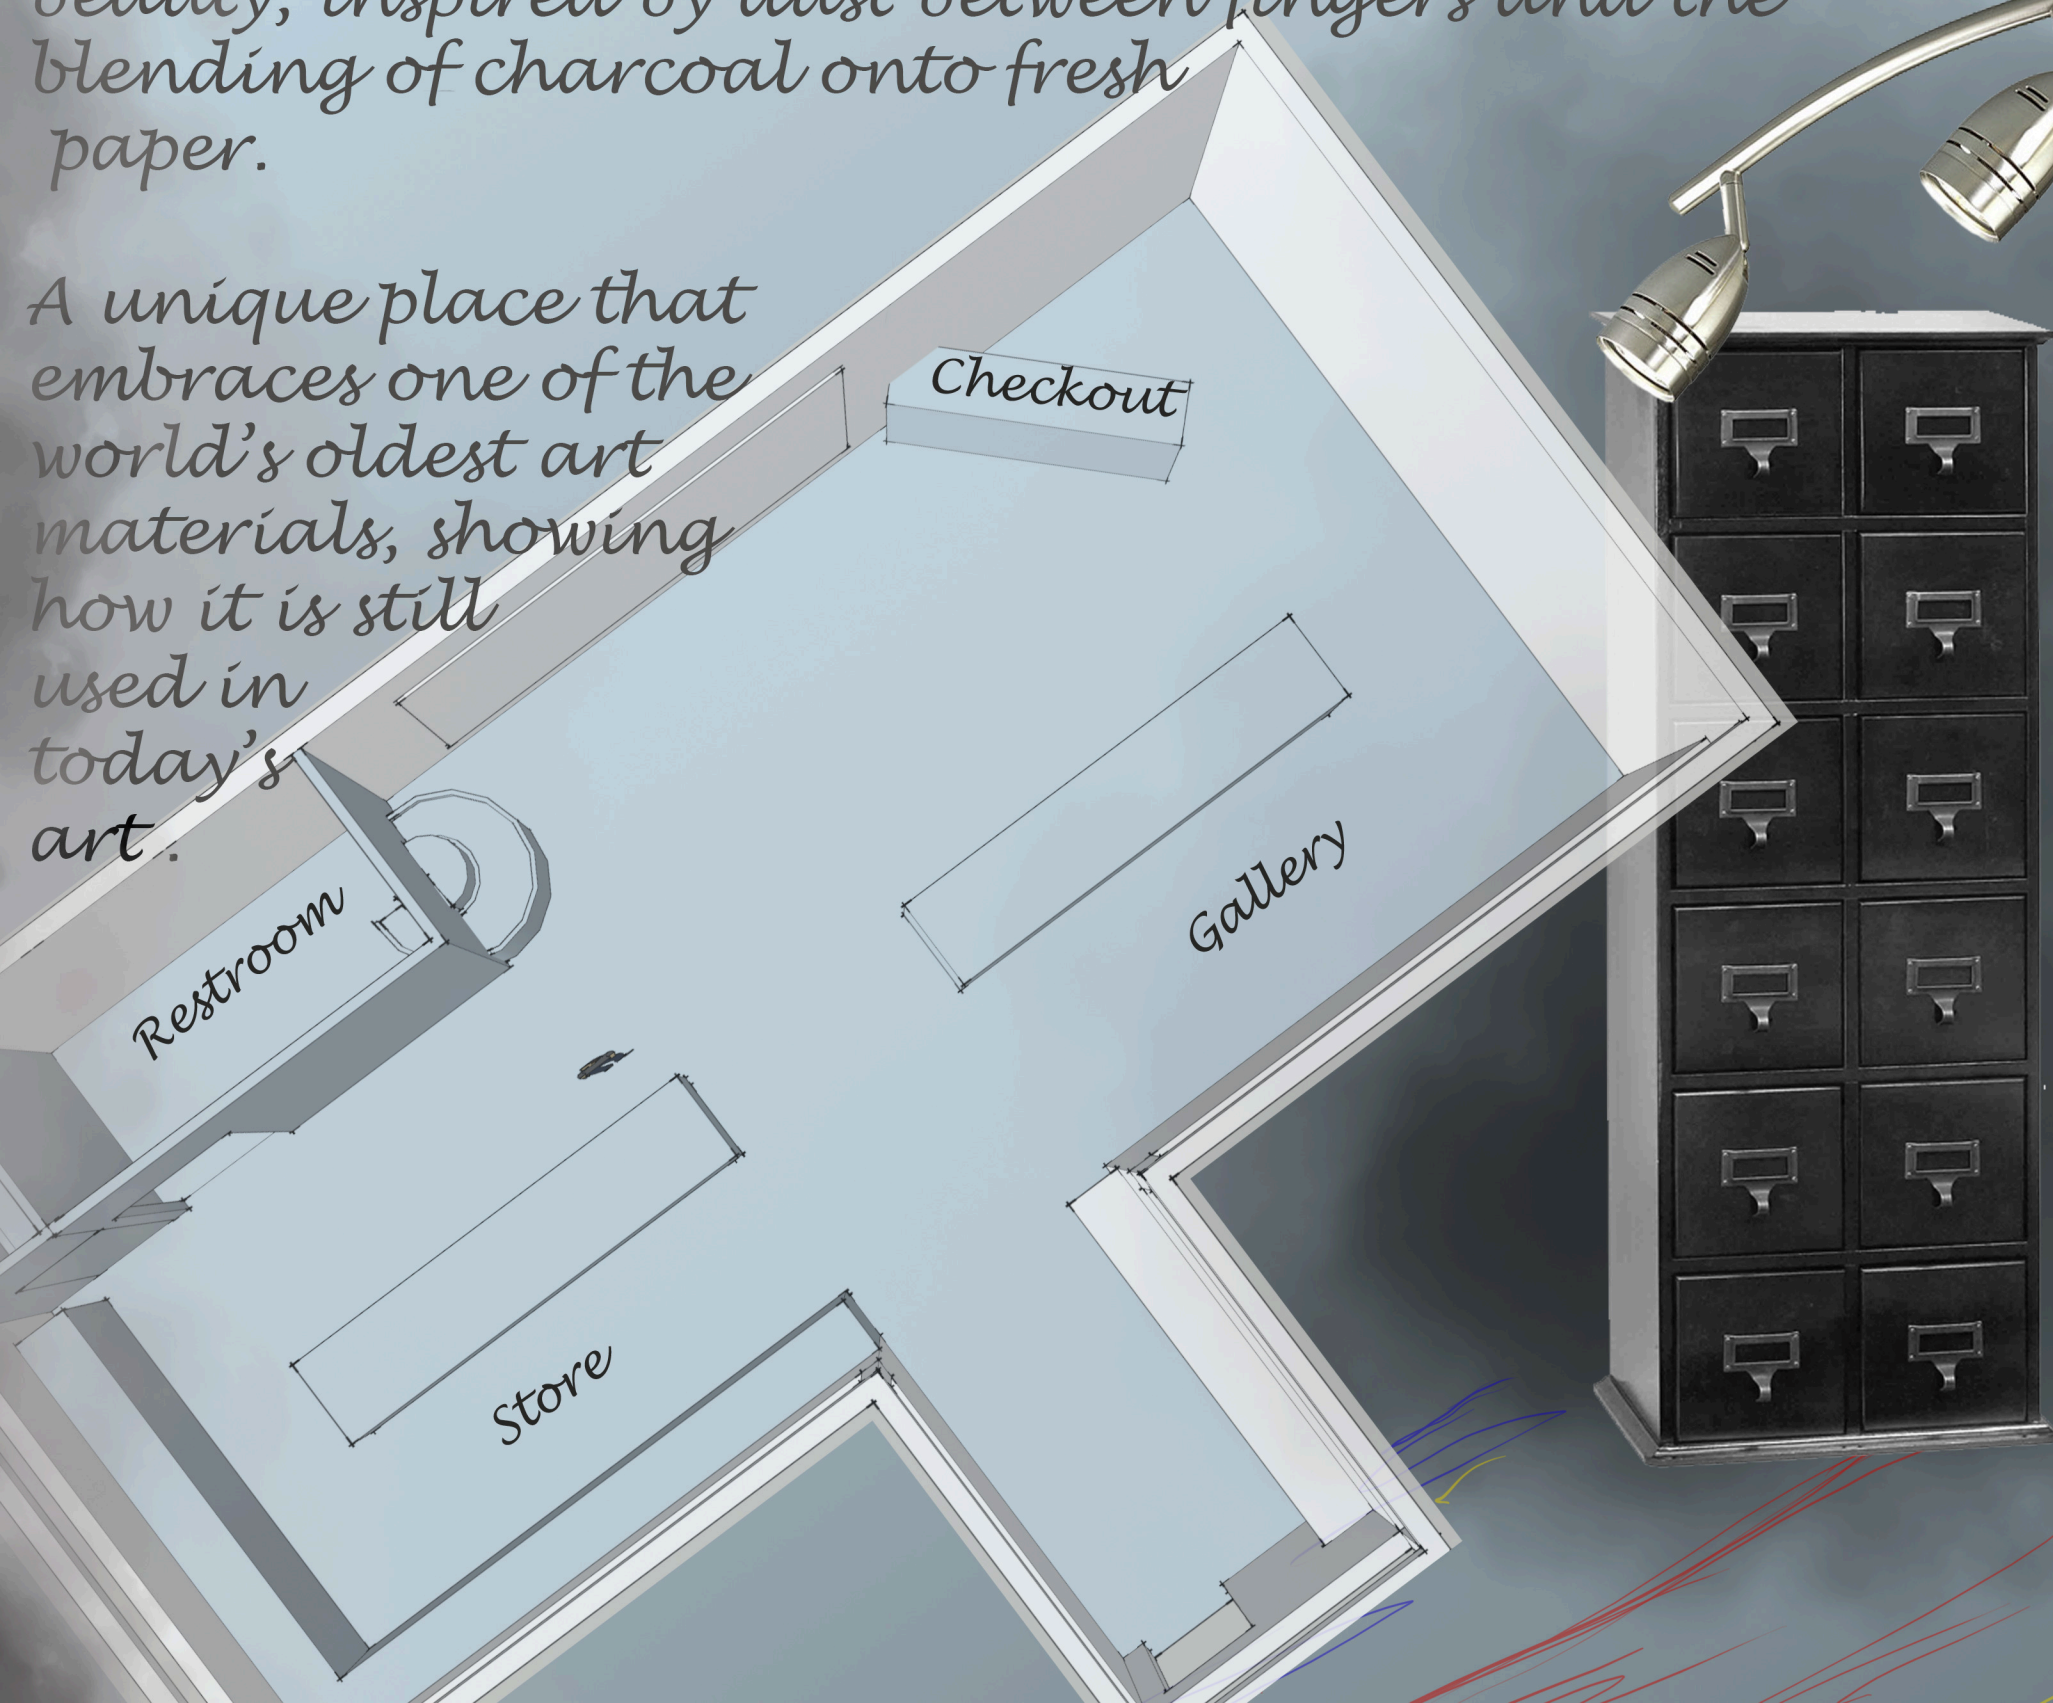

Coal Dust

Live Work Space

Coal dust; words that invoke images of blackness, miners and factories.

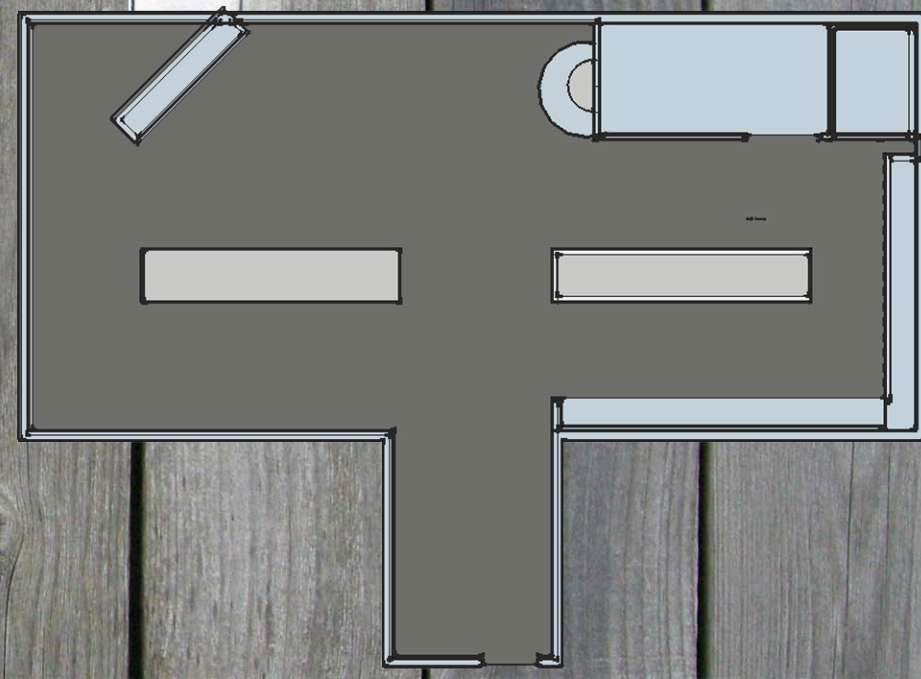

Coal Dust, will change those images into ones of beauty; inspired by dust between fingers and the blending of charcoal onto fresh paper.

A unique place that embraces one of the world's oldest art materials, showing how it is still used in today's art.

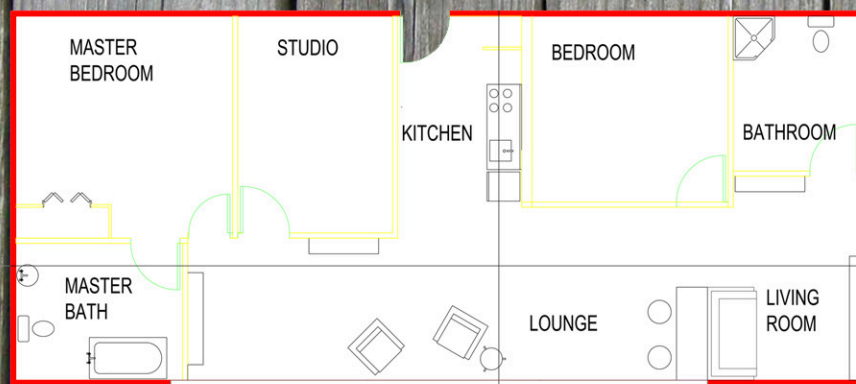

Work Space

Celebrating one of the world's oldest art mediums, Coal Dust is a specialty art supply store which allows you to test different shades of charcoal on a variety of papers
